BOOKS:

- Chan, Chou Ming, Book of Changes: An Interpretation (1997)
 Cleary, Thomas, The Buddhist I Ching (1987)
 Fu, Youde, The I Ching: Text and Annotated Translation (1995)
 Ho, Peng-Yoke, “In Harmony with Nature: Principles Spanning the Sciences and Humanities, University of Hong Kong, Supplement to the Gazette, 29.4 (April 28, 1982)
 Huang, Alfred, trans. The Complete I Ching (1998)
 Lynn, Richard John, The Classic of Changes . . . As Interpreted by Wang Bi (1994)
 Needham, Joseph, ed., Science and Civilisation in China (1962), vol. 2.
 Ritsema, Rudolf and Stephen Karcher, trans. I Ching: The Classic Chinese Oracle of Change (1994)
 Rutt, Richard, The Book of Changes (Zhouyi) (1996)
 Schulz, Larry, “Lai Chih-te (1525-1604) and the Phenomenology of the ‘Classic of Change’ (I Ching)”
 Shaughnessy, Edward, I Ching: The Classic of Changes (1997)
 Whincup, Greg, Rediscovering the I Ching (1986)
 Wilhelm, Richard, The I Ching or Book of Changes (1990)
 Wu, Jing-Nuan, Yi Jing (1991)

Key to books: (C)=Chan; (Cl)=Cleary; (F)=Fu; (H)=Huang; (Ho)=Ho; (L)=Lynn; (N)=Needham; (R&K)=Ritsema & Karcher; (R)=Rutt; (Sc)=Schulz; (Sh)=Shaughnessy; (Wh)=Whincup; (W)=Wilhelm; (Wu)=Wu.

NOTE: The translations by Rutt, Whincup and Wu reflect speculations about the Changes in its comparatively early stages of development (say, the early Eastern Zhou period, c. 8th or 7th century BCE). The translations by Shaughnessy are based on the Mawangdui version of the Changes produced in the Early Han period (c. 190 BCE)—a version of the document in which both the order of the hexagrams and about two dozen of the hexagram names differ significantly from the received version. The translation by Lynn represents a prominent 3rd century CE understanding of the text; the work by Wilhelm represents a similarly prominent 12th century understanding of the text, and the work by Schulz represents a somewhat idiosyncratic but still highly influential 16th century understanding of the text. The other renderings of the hexagram names that appear below are either based on more or less “modern” understandings of the Changes (e.g. Chan, Fu and Huang) or on a particular philosophical approach to the classic (for instance Cleary, whose renderings of hexagram names are basically the same in both his Buddhist I Ching [1987] and his Taoist I Ching [1986], and Ritsema and Karcher, who adopt an explicitly Jungian approach to the text). Ho’s “In Harmony with Nature” provides two descriptions of the hexagram names—one that refers to what he calls their “common meanings” and the other that considers the “concrete or social significance” of each hexagram. These two characterizations are distinguished below by a lower case “a.” for the former category, and a lower case “b.” for the latter. The translations by both Ho and Needham sometimes have a somewhat “scientific” cast.

Key to numerical codes at the end of each entry [in brackets]: 6 indicates a broken (yin) line: ____ ____; 9 indicates a solid (yang) line: _____. The first number represents the bottom line. Thus, 966699 is hexagram 42, Yi, which looks like this:

Yi 益

THE SIXTY-FOUR HEXAGRAMS IN THE RECEIVED ORDER (with a few prominent variant characters)

NOTE: I have provided all of the variant characters (but not the variant pronunciations) for the Mawangdui version of the Changes—so if a character does not appear immediately after Shaughnessy’s translation of the hexagram name, this means that the character or characters in the Mawangdui version are the same as those in the received text.
